by Laura Yovan

That was the question that lead -　　　er us to sit down and figure out if we had a real problem or if it was just part of the natural cycle. We decided that it was a problem and that we needed to do something about it.

The definition of sustainability is a constant work in progress. In general, sustainability refers to the ability of a system or society to continue functioning in a way that is equitable and just for all people and to meet the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.

Clearly, sustainability is the foundation for the achievement of both our national and local goals. In our case, it is crucial that we maintain a certain level of economic viability in order to support the community. For this reason, we must make sure that our goals are realistic and that we have the resources to achieve them. We have a lot of work to do, but we are taking steps towards sustainability and we are making progress.

We are not alone in our efforts. Many other communities are also working towards sustainability. We are part of a larger network of communities that are working together to achieve our shared goals. We are learning from each other and we are sharing our experiences.

So, let’s do this together. Let’s work towards sustainability. Let’s make sure that our actions are equitable and just for all people. Let’s make sure that we have the resources to achieve our goals. Let’s make sure that we are making progress. Let’s make sure that we are making a difference.

We can do this. We are strong. We are resilient. We are committed. We can make a difference. We can achieve sustainability. We can make our community a better place for everyone.

(Continued from Page 4)

By Laura Yovan

That was the question that lead -　　er us to sit down and figure out if we had a real problem or if it was just part of the natural cycle. We decided that it was a problem and that we needed to do something about it.

The definition of sustainability is a constant work in progress. In general, sustainability refers to the ability of a system or society to continue functioning in a way that is equitable and just for all people and to meet the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.

Clearly, sustainability is the foundation for the achievement of both our national and local goals. In our case, it is crucial that we maintain a certain level of economic viability in order to support the community. For this reason, we must make sure that our goals are realistic and that we have the resources to achieve them. We have a lot of work to do, but we are taking steps towards sustainability and we are making progress.

We are not alone in our efforts. Many other communities are also working towards sustainability. We are part of a larger network of communities that are working together to achieve our shared goals. We are learning from each other and we are sharing our experiences.

So, let’s do this together. Let’s work towards sustainability. Let’s make sure that our actions are equitable and just for all people. Let’s make sure that we have the resources to achieve our goals. Let’s make sure that we are making progress. Let’s make sure that we are making a difference.

We can do this. We are strong. We are resilient. We are committed. We can make a difference. We can achieve sustainability. We can make our community a better place for everyone.

(Continued from Page 4)

By Laura Yovan

That was the question that lead -　　er us to sit down and figure out if we had a real problem or if it was just part of the natural cycle. We decided that it was a problem and that we needed to do something about it.

The definition of sustainability is a constant work in progress. In general, sustainability refers to the ability of a system or society to continue functioning in a way that is equitable and just for all people and to meet the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.

Clearly, sustainability is the foundation for the achievement of both our national and local goals. In our case, it is crucial that we maintain a certain level of economic viability in order to support the community. For this reason, we must make sure that our goals are realistic and that we have the resources to achieve them. We have a lot of work to do, but we are taking steps towards sustainability and we are making progress.

We are not alone in our efforts. Many other communities are also working towards sustainability. We are part of a larger network of communities that are working together to achieve our shared goals. We are learning from each other and we are sharing our experiences.

So, let’s do this together. Let’s work towards sustainability. Let’s make sure that our actions are equitable and just for all people. Let’s make sure that we have the resources to achieve our goals. Let’s make sure that we are making progress. Let’s make sure that we are making a difference.

We can do this. We are strong. We are resilient. We are committed. We can make a difference. We can achieve sustainability. We can make our community a better place for everyone.

(Continued from Page 4)

By Laura Yovan

That was the question that lead -　　er us to sit down and figure out if we had a real problem or if it was just part of the natural cycle. We decided that it was a problem and that we needed to do something about it.

The definition of sustainability is a constant work in progress. In general, sustainability refers to the ability of a system or society to continue functioning in a way that is equitable and just for all people and to meet the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.

Clearly, sustainability is the foundation for the achievement of both our national and local goals. In our case, it is crucial that we maintain a certain level of economic viability in order to support the community. For this reason, we must make sure that our goals are realistic and that we have the resources to achieve them. We have a lot of work to do, but we are taking steps towards sustainability and we are making progress.

We are not alone in our efforts. Many other communities are also working towards sustainability. We are part of a larger network of communities that are working together to achieve our shared goals. We are learning from each other and we are sharing our experiences.

So, let’s do this together. Let’s work towards sustainability. Let’s make sure that our actions are equitable and just for all people. Let’s make sure that we have the resources to achieve our goals. Let’s make sure that we are making progress. Let’s make sure that we are making a difference.

We can do this. We are strong. We are resilient. We are committed. We can make a difference. We can achieve sustainability. We can make our community a better place for everyone.

(Continued from Page 4)

By Laura Yovan

That was the question that lead -　　er us to sit down and figure out if we had a real problem or if it was just part of the natural cycle. We decided that it was a problem and that we needed to do something about it.

The definition of sustainability is a constant work in progress. In general, sustainability refers to the ability of a system or society to continue functioning in a way that is equitable and just for all people and to meet the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.

Clearly, sustainability is the foundation for the achievement of both our national and local goals. In our case, it is crucial that we maintain a certain level of economic viability in order to support the community. For this reason, we must make sure that our goals are realistic and that we have the resources to achieve them. We have a lot of work to do, but we are taking steps towards sustainability and we are making progress.

We are not alone in our efforts. Many other communities are also working towards sustainability. We are part of a larger network of communities that are working together to achieve our shared goals. We are learning from each other and we are sharing our experiences.

So, let’s do this together. Let’s work towards sustainability. Let’s make sure that our actions are equitable and just for all people. Let’s make sure that we have the resources to achieve our goals. Let’s make sure that we are making progress. Let’s make sure that we are making a difference.

We can do this. We are strong. We are resilient. We are committed. We can make a difference. We can achieve sustainability. We can make our community a better place for everyone.

(Continued from Page 4)

By Laura Yovan

That was the question that lead -　　er us to sit down and figure out if we had a real problem or if it was just part of the natural cycle. We decided that it was a problem and that we needed to do something about it.

The definition of sustainability is a constant work in progress. In general, sustainability refers to the ability of a system or society to continue functioning in a way that is equitable and just for all people and to meet the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.

Clearly, sustainability is the foundation for the achievement of both our national and local goals. In our case, it is crucial that we maintain a certain level of economic viability in order to support the community. For this reason, we must make sure that our goals are realistic and that we have the resources to achieve them. We have a lot of work to do, but we are taking steps towards sustainability and we are making progress.

We are not alone in our efforts. Many other communities are also working towards sustainability. We are part of a larger network of communities that are working together to achieve our shared goals. We are learning from each other and we are sharing our experiences.

So, let’s do this together. Let’s work towards sustainability. Let’s make sure that our actions are equitable and just for all people. Let’s make sure that we have the resources to achieve our goals. Let’s make sure that we are making progress. Let’s make sure that we are making a difference.

We can do this. We are strong. We are resilient. We are committed. We can make a difference. We can achieve sustainability. We can make our community a better place for everyone.

(Continued from Page 4)